

Launch Into Your Future

Campus Support Services

Student Learning Deck

Three ideas to use now

- Know this

- Support may include advising, tutoring, counseling, disability services, career services, first-generation programs, and basic-needs help.
- The name, eligibility, hours, and process differ by institution.
- Students should keep contact names, appointment dates, and follow-up steps.

What to know. What to verify.

Start here

- Students are more likely to persist when they know which campus office to contact, ask early, and follow through before a small concern becomes a larger barrier.
- Support may include advising, tutoring, counseling, disability services, career services, first-generation programs, and basic-needs help.

Verify before acting

- Do not promise eligibility, accommodations, appointment availability, emergency aid, or a particular outcome.
- Use the student's institution-specific support directory.

Build your action plan

- Next moves

- List the academic, personal, financial, accessibility, or basic-needs concern.
- Find the official campus office that owns that concern.
- Ask what documents, appointment, referral, or intake step is required.
- Schedule the contact and save confirmation.

Use it now

Exit ticket

Write the next action you will take about Campus Support Services. Name the official person or office that can verify your information, and choose a follow-up date.

