

Launch Into Your Future

Industry Credentials & Licensure

Student Learning Deck

Three ideas to use now

- Know this

- A certificate of completion is not automatically a certification or license.
- Licensure is controlled by a government or legal authority.
- Employer recognition varies by occupation and region.

What to know. What to verify.

Start here

- A certificate of completion is not automatically a certification or license.
- Licensure is controlled by a government or legal authority.

Verify before acting

- Do not promise eligibility, availability, admission, funding, placement, credit, licensure, or an outcome.
- Recheck dynamic information with the official owner before the student acts.

Build your action plan

- Next moves

- Name the target occupation.
- Identify the exact credential and issuer.
- Verify prerequisites, exam, cost, renewal, and age rules.
- Check whether Delaware licensure is required.

Use it now

Exit ticket

Write the next action you will take about Industry Credentials & Licensure. Name the official person or office that can verify your information, and choose a follow-up date.

